出身国や外国で過ごした経験について教えてください：

I was born and raised in Vietnam — a country rich in history, culture, and community spirit. I studied International Economics and worked in the automobile industry, where I collaborated with international partners from various countries. Through this experience, I developed a strong appreciation for cross-cultural understanding. Now, I'm living in Hiroshima as a graduate student. Being in Japan has allowed me to experience another culture deeply and reflect more on what makes Vietnamese culture special and worth sharing.

広島の児童・生徒たちにどんなことを学んでほしいですか：

I would love for students to experience the warmth and beauty of Vietnam through stories, daily customs, and small joys like traditional games or making Vietnamese spring rolls together! I also hope to show how cultures can be different yet connected. By learning about Vietnam, I want students to feel more curious about the world and more confident in sharing their own stories, too. Learning about others is a way of learning about ourselves. But most importantly, I hope they come away with open minds — excited to explore the world, curious about differences, and confident in who they are.

Hi everyone! My name is Pham Thi Thoa, and I'm from Vietnam. I'm currently living in Hiroshima and studying as a graduate student.

I love exploring cultures, learning new languages, and connecting with people. I believe that every culture has something meaningful to share — and I'm excited to bring a piece of Vietnam to your classroom! Whether it's teaching a fun Vietnamese phrase, showing how we celebrate the Lunar New Year, or simply talking about daily life back home, I hope to create a warm and engaging experience for you all.
